

HEALTH CHECK (715)

HAVE YOU
HAD YOUR HEALTH
CHECK?

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander mob are eligible for a free health check (715) every 9-12 months.

What is a health check?

A health check is an overall assessment of your health including your physical, mental and social wellbeing.

What happens at a health check?

A health check takes a little longer than a normal appointment (about 45 minutes). You'll have a yarn with an Aboriginal Health Worker or Registered Nurse and a GP and they'll ask you questions about your health and may carry out tests including:

- hearing and eyesight
- oral health and hygiene
- social health and wellbeing
- physical health and nutrition
- immunisation status
- a physical examination
- medical history including medications and allergies
- general health, e.g. blood pressure, weight, height.

After your health assessment your GP may provide advice and further information or create a care plan for you. This care plan may include follow-up treatment with an allied health professional or specialist if needed.

Why have a health check?

Health checks are all about preventative health – not just seeing the doctor when you are sick but visiting them to detect, prevent or better manage chronic disease and remain healthy.

Everyone who gets a health check at an ATSICHS Brisbane clinic can choose a Deadly Choices jersey. Each year there are different designs to select.
